The project combines two apartments, for a total of 260 square meters and completely changed the original layout", says Manuel Terica, owner of The Great Living Estate, who took care of the renovation involving the architect Pietro Corcione who then designed the project. Here is the description of the architect. From the first inspection, we were struck by the beautiful view of the village of St. Moritz and its lake. This view had to be enhanced. Subsequent demolitions created an open space overlooking that magnificent view. kitchen. A harmonious blend of materials gives a contemporary and authentic spirit.

The heat-treated oak used for the floor blends perfectly with the gray marbles used with a carved finish.

A boiserie, made with oak strips, characterizes the distribution corridor of the apartment. Details in burnished brass help to create an elegant mood, as do the custom-made handles embellished with dark brown leather details. Niches covered in gray natural stone with a matte finish complete this architectural backdrop.

Four double bedrooms with their respective bathrooms are inserted along this axis.

The main bedroom is characterized by the exposed shower covered in Honey Onyx.

The headboard of the bed is embellished with forest green velvet fabric set in brass strips.

Particular attention was given to the lighting project. Indirect lighting, made with continuous LED strips, integrates with more decorative and point-like lighting, thus creating a balance rich in luminous accents (from the architect's project description).

Pietro Corcione

He graduated in Architecture at the University of Florence in 2000, the following year together with Arch. Alessandro Tinucci founds the Corcione Tinucci Architects studio. After numerous projects at various scales, he decides to continue his professional activity independently, developing projects in Italy and abroad.

The experience in the residential and commercial fields allows us to develop Architecture and Interior Design projects that satisfy every formal and aesthetic request of the customer.

Curiosity and the desire to create new projects, designed for a specific space and a specific place, is the lifeblood that gives us energy. This creative energy pushes us to review traditional concepts and established habits, trying to observe them from another point of view, in order to create something innovative.

The client, with his needs and desires, remains at the center of our reflections. We try to guide him through the design choices to define the design of the smallest details.

We try to analyze and criticize each solution in order to create a fruitful collaboration between the client and the studio.

The studio has a multidisciplinary approach. Our professional collaborations allow us to manage projects at any scale and complexity. We always give a timely answer for each phase of the design process.
